

Family & Parent Leadership

ADVISE

- Provide input through surveys, focus groups, and interviews.
- Participate on advisory boards to help guide program, agency, and/or system decision-making.
- Parents can see how their and other families' input is being used.

If this is the only leadership role parents are invited to engage in, it can feel disempowering.

COLLABORATE

- Sit "at the table" and collaborate with system leaders to make decisions, set priorities, co-design programs and strategies, and carry out actions.
- Co-facilitate trainings and and partner on community outreach efforts.
- Serve on boards of organizations and coalitions locally, regionally or at the state level.

This role is more empowering because parents have more direct influence over decisions and actions affecting their lives and those of other families.

LEAD

- Serve as change agents to transform systems and communities by directly leading efforts to identify local needs.
- Set their own agendas and priorities, design strategies, and carry out actions.

This role is most empowering for parents as they are the ones driving change. It also helps to build community capacity to pursue bigger types of change.
