

Spirals

"The spiral is important to me. It is a focus. As a child, after seeking repetition in the stars, I would turn and twist and spin them... Later I would stretch my body to infinity. It would do it all by drawing by bringing her back. The spiral... I love the spiral... represents control and freedom."

—JOHN BROWN

p. 22

Drawing spirals is one of the most therapeutic, satisfying activities you can do. You can draw lots of different kinds of spirals, not just circles. Start with a few circles and then move into other geometric shapes. Then create some organic shapes and make more spirals.

Experiment with drawing from the inside out, and outside in. Do you feel yourself gravitating towards one or the other?
