ABSTRACT

The Halden Reactor was one of the first experimental reactors in the world, built into a mountain cave in the middle of the town of Halden (120 km south of Oslo). The reactor went critical for the first time in June 1959. The experimental programme is run under the auspices of the OECD Halden Reactor Project (HRP). This was established in 1958 as a joint undertaking of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency. The Project is an international collaboration and today 21 participating countries are sponsoring the experimental programme. This paper gives an overview of the Halden Reactor and its associated experimental facilities; the current research program on fuels and materials testing, including some selected results; and finally an outline of the planned research activities in the period 2000 – 2002.

PARTICIPATING COUNTRIES

INTRODUCTION

The OECD Halden Reactor Project was established in 1958 as a joint undertaking of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency through an agreement between the national nuclear centres of OECD member countries sponsoring the experimental programme for the Halden Boiling Water Reactor.

The Project is an international collaboration and today 21 participating countries are sponsoring the experimental programme. The organisations participating in the Halden Project represent a complete cross section of the R&D community, including licensing and regulatory bodies, vendors, utility industry and research organisations.

* Seconded to the HRP from Siemens in the period Oct. 1998 – March 2000
