

Puffins

Puffins are diving seabirds and have the nickname the 'clowns of the sea.' There are four species of puffin: the Atlantic, bonaparte, tufted and thomson's auklet.

Appearance

Puffins have black and white feathers and orange feet. They are well known for their colourful beaks during nesting season.

After the breeding season, the outer shell of their beaks will fall away to reveal a shorter and darker coloured bill. They have short wings which are a useful tool for swimming under water.

Feet

Puffins eat fish such as herring and hake and also plankton and squid. They dive under water to catch fish and can stay there for up to one minute. Puffins can hold several fish in their beaks at once. This allows them to return to their nests with more food for their pufflings.

Habitat

Puffins spend the majority of their lives out at sea, resting on rocks when they are not swimming. During the spring and summer, colonies gather on cliff edges and islands to breed. Puffins use rocky crevices or build their nests by burrowing into the ground with their feet and beaks. They are clean animals and have a separate toilet area in their burrows.

Conservation

Although puffins are not regarded as endangered, their numbers are falling rapidly. Humans often have a negative effect on the puffin population with global warming, oil spills and use of fishing nets contributing to their decline.

Amazing Fact

Puffins can flap their wings up to 400 times a minute.
