

9. Quality Assurance Plans

A Quality Assurance Plan (QAP) is a written document, which presents, in specific terms, the policies, organization, objectives, functional activities, and specific QA and QC activities that are designed to achieve the objectives of the project (U.S. EPA 1980, U.S. EPA 1992b).

The QAP serves three main purposes. First, and most important, it is the culmination of the discussion and planning that went into designing the operation to produce results that are of the quality needed. Second, it is a historical record that documents the operation in terms of measurement methods used, calibration standards and frequencies planned, auditing planned, etc. Lastly, a QAP provides management with a document that can be used to assess whether the planned QA activities are being implemented, and to examine the importance of these activities toward the goal of quality data in terms of relative bias, precision error, and other indicators of quality.

The Agency's draft interim final requirements for Quality Assurance Project Plans for Environmental Data Operations (EPA QA/R-5, U.S. EPA 1992a) provides guidance regarding components of a QA Plan. This and other EPA QA guidance is being written using ANSI/ASQC guidance (ANSI/ASQC 1994a) as a framework. When EPA QA/R-5 becomes final, it will supersede previous Agency guidance (QAMS-005/80; U.S. EPA 1980). This guidance is intended for organizations that gather data on behalf of EPA through contracts, financial assistance agreements, and interagency agreements. Although most radon measurement organizations do not fall into this category, this section provides information regarding format and terminology from both the Agency's 1980 guidance and the draft interim final guidance.

There are 16 elements of a QAP that are described in EPA's guidance for preparing such plans (U.S. EPA 1980, U.S. EPA 1989). These elements are described here along with terminology used by other organizations. These elements should be present in a QAP, and presentation in the order described in this section will facilitate review by EPA and others (for example, by residential service providers). Exhibit 9-1 describes which elements are necessary for the QAPs of analytical and residential service providers.
