Petráček, 2022-09-15 A detailed study of the Catholic Church's acceptance of the historical critical method and modernization through the pivotal work of European theologians and biblical scholars One of the few topics in Catholic studies that demonstrates a marked about face in theological attitudes within the Catholic Church is the reception of the historical critical method in biblical exegesis and its dramatic rise from outright condemnation in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries to its official acceptance by the 1990s The Bible and the Crisis of Modernism tells the dramatic story of the ultimate acceptance of this modern method by the Catholic Church as it worked out the relationship between faith and reason in view of advances in the social and natural sciences Particular attention to the contributions of Czech theologians to the field of biblical exegesis foregrounds the tensions at play in the church's gradual recognition of the value of the historical critical method to a better understanding of the Christian scriptures In this extensive study of the church's response to the historical critical method Petráček broaches wider topics such as the relationship between the Catholic Church and society in the late
