

be done. These elliptical forms do not begin only at the center of the vault, for the plan too is elliptical, that is, the vault corresponding rectangle is missing, and elliptical and circular spaces can then be placed horizontally between each pair of central ellipses. The extended horizontal axis of the two small elliptical spaces coincide with the tangential line common to the first and second ellipses of the central axis. The line connecting the centers of the two large circular spaces is congruous with the tangent common to the second and third ellipses of the central axis.¹⁷ Although there is nothing present that could be called a crossing, the two circular spaces have the effect of one, because all the vaults are intersected by lines of varying height that they create the impression of a crossing, even when height (Fig. 10). The two small side ellipses form part of side walls the remaining parts of which are complicated cross spaces. Comprehension of these spatial forms is made still more difficult by the galleries that pass through the side walls, in the most elliptical spaces the vault withlines back upon itself so that here too there is no separation. The upper gallery is a little lower than the side galleries, which are supported by the piers. They are continued in the vault by the crest of one bay, which appear as extensions of the space above vaulted sections. Since the exterior enclosure is relatively very simple, enrichment of the interior is attained by direct means, as in the second phase. The vaulted spaces are placed into the total space and produce cross spaces. For since the foundations of the spaces vaulted spaces are completely limited, they have no clear definition, and all the vaults are figures because of the performance of the function. Moreover, these figures are fixed by various intersecting spaces so that the distinct form of the individual parts of space can which they ought to develop is present only by suggestion. (The two elliptical and the two circular spaces are clearly the primary factors in the design—all the rest being various supplementary parts.) A second difficulty is thus added to that created by the complex total space, since the individual forms themselves are only suggested in the inspiring void. The result of more than twenty-two part sets of the variety in this primitive church capitals between such difficulty, and this is primarily the object, to appeal not to the mind but to the imagination that substitutes itself to the ambiguous and unresolvable.

1. "Unfinished" vaults
 Unfinished vaults are present in the third phase but there is no feeling that those of the second phase were already very difficult to understand, for they were still basically simple because their components were forms of lower variety. In the third phase even the components of uncompleted vaults are very difficult to explain because they are elliptical or circular shapes that are sometimes not even the products of
