Position Of The Body:

Where are you? Self- and body part localization using virtual reality setups Albert van der Veer ,2019-09-19 This volume presents a line of original experimental studies on the bodily self investigating where people locate themselves in their bodies and how accurate they are at localizing their body parts So far it was not well known whether people locate themselves in one or more specific regions of their bodies On the other hand some systematic distortions in indicating bodily locations were already documented In the present studies participants were therefore asked to indicate their self locations as well as the locations of several of their body parts using a self directed first person perspective pointing paradigm in various virtual reality VR setups different head mounted displays and a large screen immersive display Overall participants were found to locate themselves mainly in the upper face and the upper torso However striking differences in self localization were found when testing in different VR setups Upon further investigation these differences were found to be foremost due to inaccuracies in body part localization When taking these inaccuracies into account differences between setups and also with self localization outside of VR largely disappear Another striking finding was that providing participants in between pointing phases with information about their bodies in the form of a real time animated self avatar did not make them more accurate at locating their own body parts While manipulating their viewpoint to chest height of their self avatar did shift the afterwards indicated locations of their own body parts upwards towards where they were seen on the avatar Potential explanations for the various new findings also from tasks outside of VR are discussed Taken together this volume suggests a differential involvement of multi sensory information processing in experienced self location within the body and the ability to locate body parts Self localization seems to be less flexible possibly because it is strongly grounded in the bodily senses while body part localization appears more adaptable to the manipulation of sensory stimuli at least in the visual modality

Abstract By diligently following the principles set forth in this book I am convinced that any mature person with ordinary intelligence and initiative can without previous ring experience become a capable teacher of boxing The book was primarily written to meet the requests of a number of boxing instructors many of them my former pupils who feel the need of such a handbook for their work It also arose from the suggestion of a neighbor boy who felt that a book of simplified tactics with illustrations in which the boxers were numbered and the drill counts given would enable a troop of Boy Scouts or any group of boys to learn boxing without an instructor Thus though designed for the professional teacher the book is also intended for the beginner who wishes to master the principles and technique of practical boxing How far it has succeeded in the latter aim is indicated by the comment of a father who on seeing it in manuscript declared that it was the book he had long looked for in order that he might enjoy roughing it with his boys in teaching them boxing And it is so simple said he that anyone can follow it This statement led to the title BOXING
