Postponing Parenthood:

When age begins to matter. Why postponing parenthood?, 2019-01-10 Seminar paper from the year 2014 in the subject Social Studies General grade 2 7 Humboldt University of Berlin language English abstract The paper deals with the issue of later childbearing and the driving forces behind the decision of postponing parenthood Since this is a global process which affects not only individuals on the micro level but whole populations which nowadays face many social challenges caused by the Second demographic transition Socio economic reasons mixed with cultural differences and changing values are among the main reasons for the shift of the timing of childbearing among women With the equalization of rights between men and women the educational level of the female population has increased leading to better career opportunities and the abandonment of the typical view on women as housewives The introduction of contraceptive methods and the development of medical technology have given women more freedom in the decision making process concerning family formation and childbearing but if this tendency continues what effects could we expect on the society and should governments intervene in individuals life course choices so that we do not experience lasting negative outcomes This and other questions are still left unanswered but should probably be included on the agenda

Postponing Parenthood Gale A. Sloan, 1993-03-21 With increasing numbers of women postponing childbearing until after the age of 30 the issue of delayed pregnancy and parenthood seen against the increased risk of infertility becomes complex After devoting time to professional or personal concerns both women and men face the disheartening result that physiological changes may make conception impossible Postponing Parenthood The Effect of Age on Reproductive Potential is an important resource for learning in advance how the aging process directly influences the physical ability of an adult to start a family Gale A Sloan R N an expert medical writer specializing in issues of fertility and aging compassionately looks at the circumstances that couples who have put off childbearing or who are considering doing so must handle These include the overall effect of age on a woman s potential to conceive the biological and genetic risks facing both women and men the painstaking precautions a couple must exercise to protect or enhance fertility the accurate medical details concerning conception the new technological treatments that allow more women to carry to term safely the psychological influence of parental age on the development of a child and the time to consider adoption as a reasonable option in beginning parenthood Many books discuss the issue of infertility but Postponing Parenthood strives to diminish the possibility of this condition occurring Enhancing the discussion with a detailed questionnaire exploring signs that may indicate infertility Ms Sloan carefully outlines the steps to facilitate conception how to know if it is taking too long and the specific medical consultation to seek This is extremely important because many of the infertility experts in the United States lack sufficiently extensive training and knowledge of current technological treatments in the field of infertility After a thorough presentation of the tests performed in an infertility workup including their cost and effectiveness Ms Sloan discusses new reproductive technologies including in vitro fertilization gamete intrafallopian transfer

GIFT and zygote intrafallopian transfer ZIFT from the perspective of their success rates in women of various ages Women and men waiting to have a child along with specialists in obstetrics and gynecology pediatricians psychologists public health personnel nurses sociologists and marriage and family counselors will undoubtedly benefit from Ms Sloan's crucial information on the social and medical implications of delayed childbearing

Preventing Age Related Fertility Loss Dominic Stoop, 2017-10-27 This unique book provides expert advice on all the different aspects related to fertility preservation for age related infertility Although there is a lot of information available on the Internet and in books about fertility preservation for cancer treatment little information is available for young women that are confronted with a ticking biological clock While men have been able to cryopreserve sperm since the 1950s women have only recently gained the opportunity to preserve their gametes through the egg vitrification technique Therefore many women confronted with a risk of imminent fertility loss such as chemotherapy are now freezing their oocytes instead of embryos Successful oocyte cryopreservation offers them a reproductive autonomy independent of men Moreover it now enables single women to preserve their reproductive chances The most important threat for female fertility is ovarian aging as it causes a progressive decline in the reproductive chances The general trend to delay motherhood due to societal changes confronts many women and couples with a diminished fertility This fertility problem can often not be cured by in vitro fertilization which makes that an increasing number of women require oocyte donation as the treatment of last resort In the last few years fertility centres around the world have started to offer the opportunity cryopreserve oocytes to young often highly educated single women This patient population is unique as compared to other patients in the fertility clinic as they perform a preventive treatment They are neither confronted with infertility nor are they undergoing a treatment that might cause an imminent treat to their fertility
