

Question: My motherboard will not POST with the RAM inserted. I ordered the motherboard from Amazon along with all the other parts. The computer would initially not POST until I took off the CPU cooler and reseated the RAM. Then it worked and I upgraded from Windows 10 to Windows 11 and played some games. After approximately 1.5-2 hours the computer bluescreened with the error Crypto library internal error and would not POST afterwards. When trying to turn it on the computer would light up, the RAM light would turn on in the motherboard, the fans would spin and the RGB would turn on in the RAM. After a minute or two, it would turn itself off and then turn itself back on after 1-2 minutes. The only way to stop this was to manually turn it off which I did. I then returned the motherboard, thinking it to be the problem only for the problem to persist except for the power cycling which did not appear again. Curiously, the power lights on my case would no longer turn on even though the cable was plugged in. I then thought it was the RAM so I returned that and when I got the new RAM, the issue still persisted. Is the CPU "training" the RAM? If so, it is taking much longer than others have said it would. I would appreciate product support/advice on this issue.

Answer: The ticket is being processed.
