Rodens Corner:

Roden's Corner Henry Seton Merriman, 1913 Roden's Corner Henry Seton Merriman, 2019-12-11 In Roden's Corner Henry Seton Merriman weaves a compelling narrative that intricately examines themes of love, friendship, and moral dilemmas against the backdrop of English society at the turn of the 20th century. The story is characterized by Merriman's deft use of dialogue and vivid characterizations capturing the complexities of human emotions and relationships. Set in a rural estate, the novel showcases the tension between social class and personal aspirations, expertly navigating the conventions of the time while infusing a sense of realism that engages the reader's empathy and intellect. Henry Seton Merriman, a contemporary of the Edwardian literary scene, drew upon his diverse background as a traveler, journalist, and keen observer of human behavior to craft this poignant tale. His experiences in the British colonial territories and deep understanding of social dynamics inform the characters' struggles, representing a microcosm of the wider societal changes of his era. Merriman's work often reflects a juxtaposition of personal desires and societal expectations, a theme that resonates throughout Roden's Corner. This novel is an essential read for anyone interested in classic literature that thoughtfully critiques human relationships within a specific historical context. Merriman's insightful narrative and rich character development make this book a rewarding experience for both scholars and casual readers alike, illuminating the intricate dance between love and duty in a rapidly changing world.

Roden's Corner Hugh Stowell Scott, 1909 Roden's Corner Henry Seto Merriman, 2004-03-01 Some say that it is not wise to pass through St Jacob Straat or Bezem Straat alone and after nightfall for there are lurking forms within the doorways and shuffling feet may be heard in the many passages. During the daytime the passer by will if he looks up quickly enough see furtive faces at the windows of men and more especially of women who never seem to come abroad but pass their lives behind those unwashed curtains with carefully closed windows and in an atmosphere which may be faintly imagined by a glance at the wares in the shop below. The pavement of St Jacob Straat is also pressed into the service of that commerce in old metal and damaged domestic utensils which seems to enable thousands of the accursed people to live and thrive according to their lights. It will be observed that the vendors with a knowledge of human nature doubtless bred of experience only expose upon the pavement articles such as bedsteads, stoves, and other heavy ware which may not be snatched up by the fleet of foot. Within the shops are crowded clothes and books and a thousand miscellaneous effects of small value. A hush seems to hang over this street. Even the children, white faced and melancholy with deep expressionless eyes and drooping noses, seem to have realized too soon the gravity of life and rarely indulge in games.
